Regulating Gas-Powered Small Engine Equipment in Toronto Public Consultation Notice – Toronto Residents

Did you know that a two-stroke mower can be more polluting than a car?

According to Environment Canada, running an older, gas-powered lawnmower for one hour is equal to driving a new car between 320 and 480 kilometres -- the distance from Toronto to Ottawa.

Two-stroke engines, found in older lawn and garden equipment, such as leaf blowers, lawnmowers and trimmers, emit a high level of pollutants into the air. Join us to address this challenge as we investigate actions, including potential regulations, to help reduce the use of small engine equipment in Toronto*.
