Financial Impact

DECISION HISTORY

In June, 2006 Council approved Review Panel Guidelines for Community Partnership and Investment Programs. A review panel is a body that includes people other than City staff which assesses eligible applications and makes recommendations regarding the allocation of funding. Establishing an Allocations Review Panel requires approval from City Council.

ISSUE BACKGROUND

The Identify 'N Impact Investment (INI) program was approved by Council to fund youth-led projects that enhance engagement opportunities for youth through community organizations and groups. The program was initiated through the advocacy efforts of the Toronto Youth Cabinet, and works to encourage and build youth leadership capacity.

The participation of youth in the review of applicants was initiated in the 2006 INI process, and provided helpful information and insight into the assessment of applicants. The Panel will work with staff to review eligible applications and make funding recommendations. The panel members will bring an understanding of youth culture and local opportunities to the review process that is not currently available within the city.

COMMENTS

Panel members were recruited through a flyer that was distributed widely across the city, sent to youth organizations and posted on the city web site. Toronto Youth Cabinet members created the flyer and participated in the outreach to potential panel members. Community Development staff identified young people in priority neighbourhoods who might be interested in participating.

In keeping with the Council approved focus of the Identify 'N Impact program, recommended members live in one of the city's 13 priority neighbourhood areas and represent racialized youth, particularly African Canadian youth. Recruitment was targeted to youth who have not had previous opportunities to participate in formal engagement processes or decision-making bodies.

Representatives of the Toronto Youth Cabinet worked with staff to select panel members through a screening and interview process. The list of individuals recommended is a result of this process, and includes representatives from seven neighbourhood areas and from Toronto Youth Cabinet. All the recommended members have confirmed their interest and participated in training workshops.

The Identify 'N Impact review panel terms of reference provide the framework for the work of the panel. Panel members' evaluation of the process will be part of any changes recommended for future years.
