The organization was established in 1994 works to promote wall art ("murals") as a public art form for the general benefit of communities and educate the public regarding mural art. The organization reported a 2006 operating budget of $10,000.00

Project Information: CANspace in Motion

This project is a pilot initiative created in 2006. The project works to promote the recognition of spray can art as a positive expression of youth culture unique to local urban settings. Spray can, or graffiti art, provides opportunities for youth artists to connect with each other and their community by producing positive images of change. Based on the success of the pilot, this project works to develop into a mentoring program of graffiti and other mural art and will focus on festivals and events in the Malvern community. The project will provide mentorship and workshops to educate youth on how to produce graffiti art, learn about the roles of art in their urban settings and works to dispel the negative stigma surrounding this form of art by promoting recognition of the talent of youth in this field. As a result, 12-15 youth will be trained in skills development for creation of graffiti art. The training will involve discussion of health and safety issues related to spray can art as well as responsibility of graffiti artists to the community. Their products (canvases) will be displayed in the Malvern library and community centre.

The second phase of the project will launch workshops and outreach events associated with the graffiti art to take place in summer 2008. A new student intern will be hired to work with the Youth Advisory Group of the organisation to coordinate the third annual Graffiti Art Festival and other related events in Malvern and Kingston Galloway. #### Project Information: Spreading Knowledge Through the Mic.

This project works to continue to support and expand the success of the Radio Program to include a mentorship component. The Radio program was started in Spring 2007 by identifying issues to be made into stories, followed by hands-on workshops covering interviewing techniques, editing, sound boarding and spoken word skills. This program was facilitated by the spoken word coordinator and a technical assistant from CHRY. Majority of the current participants want to outreach to younger youth in the community to pass on the skills they have learned and address some of the issues that arose for them in the audio pieces they worked on this year. They are aware of the consequences of the lack of positive youth space and role models in their community and the need to recognize the pressures that youth face. This project works to provide youth with a positive role model in a space that acknowledges their experiences and perspectives as relevant with skills that they can use to communicate. CHRY will air these perspectives to the community from a local radio station. As a result, mentors and participants will also be actively addressing the negative depictions of youth in Rexdale.

Organization Overview:

The group was started in 2006 after the Municipal election. This is a coalition of youth activists and agencies serving youth with an interest to raise the political clout of youth in GTA. The organization works to engage youth, in particular youth of colour, in a meaningful capacity, to provide space for them to openly discuss issues pertaining to them and their communities and to act as a mobilization tool for strategy meetings and campaigns. Services include advocacy training, mobile campaign, an interactive online service and workshops. The group starts to receive funding from various sources in mid 2007.

Project Information: YouTube - Volunteer Program

The project works to create a volunteer program that will identify 10 youth outreach specialists (YOS) with partner organizations in Toronto's 13 priority neighbourhoods. The project will challenge the structural barriers facing racialized youth in Toronto's 13 priority neighbourhoods. The Youth Outreach Specialists (YOS) will be the lead liaison for the project in collaborating events, workshops, community activities as well as providing follow-up discussions and action plans through the use of YouTube's multi-media website. The project will focus on three themes: capacity building (leadership training), civic engagement and research and analysis. The project works to advance youth advocacy efforts across Toronto and give youth the ability to know how to use the multi-media hub, to express their concerns and provide solutions to address the issues. As a result, the project works to bridge between alternative movements prevalent in youth politics and mainstream politics. It also provides an opportunity for marginalized youth to demonstrate their ability as problem solvers.
