Dear Members of the Board:

Re: Internal control findings from the 2007 audit

Receiving observations and findings on your financial reporting processes and controls is one of the benefits of an annual financial statement audit. Grant Thornton LLP implemented new processes and technology to address the changing standards of conducting a financial statement audit. This approach includes an increased emphasis on internal control.

Our audit is planned and conducted to enable us to express an audit opinion on the annual financial statements. The matters dealt with in this letter came to our attention during the conduct of our normal examination, and as a result, this letter does not necessarily include all matters that would be uncovered through a more extensive or special engagement.

The standards of the public accounting profession require us to report annually to you our findings on certain weaknesses and deficiencies in your internal controls. We have categorized our findings as follows:

- Material weaknesses (individual or aggregated deficiencies that could result in a material misstatement in the financial statements due to fraud or error)
- Significant deficiencies
- Other deficiencies and advisory comments

Significant deficiencies

1. Segregation of Duties

In an ideal internal control environment, there are certain accounting functions that should not be performed by the same person. For example the same individual should not initiate a purchase, authorize the same purchase and then sign the cheque. By segregating certain functions, a control environment is created that minimizes the risk of misstatements from fraud or error.

As is similar with many small organizations, limited resources restrict the Arena's ability to segregate each function to the appropriate extent. The Arena has implemented monitoring controls to compensate for the lack of a proper segregation of duties. The effectiveness of these monitoring controls depends on the timeliness of the review, the level of inquiry and the information reviewed. The Arena should continue to review the monitoring controls to ensure that:

- the reviews are completed on a timely basis;
- the information being reviewed is appropriate; and
- appropriate staff are completing the monitoring function.

Management response:

YES WE ARE AWARE OF THE ISSUES
DUE TO STOPPING THESE WILL BE NO CHANGES

It is management's responsibility to weigh the costs of implementing controls against the benefits that the controls will achieve. The purpose of this letter is to provide you with the information related to the identified risks so that you can make the necessary decisions.

The matters discussed herein are those that have been noted as of February 6, 2008, and we have not updated our procedures regarding these matters to the current date. In addition, this communication is prepared solely for the information of management and is not intended for any other purposes; we accept no responsibility to a third party who uses this communication.

To complete our files, please provide us with a copy of your response to our comments in the space provided.

Should you require any further information or explanations, please contact us.

Yours sincerely,
Grant Thornton LLP
