SUMMARY

This report addresses the issues raised by the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Ontario (IPC) regarding municipal by-laws which require the collection, recording and production of personal information from sellers of goods to Toronto licensed second-hand and salvage yard dealers and dealers in old gold and other precious metals and jewellery.

As a result of a complaint received on July 6, 2007, regarding the information collection practices of the City of Ottawa, relating to second-hand, the IPC conducted an investigation, which resulted in Order MO-2225 being issued to the City of Ottawa on September 11, 2007.

This Order directed the City of Ottawa and the Ottawa Police Service to cease requiring that second-hand goods shops collect certain pieces of personal information from individuals selling used goods to the shops. In addition, the IPC's Order required that those pieces of personal information that had been previously collected by the shops under the City's by-law be destroyed. This is the first time the IPC of Ontario has issued a cease collection and destruction Order under the Municipal Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (MFIPPA), or its provincial counterpart.

This report recommends that similar provisions in the City of Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 545, Licensing, as they relate to second-hand dealers, salvage yard dealers and dealers in old gold and other precious metals and jewellery, be amended to bring the Code into compliance with the Order issued to the City of Ottawa by the IPC.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Executive Director, Municipal Licensing and Standards Division recommends that:

1. The City of Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 545, Licensing, be amended by adopting the amendments in Appendix “A”, attached to this report; and,
2. The City Solicitor be directed to prepare the necessary bill to give effect to the recommendations in this report, effective immediately; and,
3. This report be forwarded to the next meeting of the Police Services Board for their information; and,

Public notice has been given in a manner prescribed in the Toronto Municipal Code Chapter 162, Notice, Public.

Financial Impact

The recommendations will have no financial impact beyond what has already been approved in the current year’s budget.

DECISION HISTORY

As a result of a complaint received on July 6, 2007, regarding the information collection practices of the City of Ottawa, the IPC conducted an investigation into the City of Ottawa’s by-law requirements for personal information collection as they pertain to second-hand dealers. The investigation resulted in the issuance by the IPC of Order MO-2225 to the City of Ottawa on September 11, 2007. This Order required the City of Ottawa to amend its licensing by-law to remove the requirement for these businesses to collect personal information and to destroy personal information previously collected under the by-law.

This report recommends that similar provisions in the City of Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 545, Licensing, as they relate to second-hand dealers, salvage yard dealers and dealers in old gold and other precious metals and jewellery, be immediately amended to prevent the possibility of the City of Toronto being subjected to an IPC Order similar to Order MO-2225.

ISSUE BACKGROUND

On July 6, 2007, the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Ontario (IPC) received correspondence from a complainant raising concerns regarding the information collection practices of the City of Ottawa and the Ottawa Police Service. Specifically, the complainant expressed the view that the collection by police of information relating to individuals who had sold items to second-hand goods shops was in contravention of MFIPPA. The complainant's correspondence also made reference to a by-law of the City of Ottawa.

The IPC opened privacy complaint files with respect to both the City of Ottawa and the Ottawa Police Service. As a result the IPC issued Order MO-2225 directing the City of Ottawa and the Ottawa Police Service to cease requiring that second-hand goods shops collect certain pieces of personal information from individuals selling used goods to the shops. In addition, the IPC's Order required that those pieces of personal information that had been previously collected by the shops under the City's by-law be destroyed.

The IPC found that the collection of personal information required by the by-law could not be justified under Section 28(2) of MFIPPA. Section 28(2) of MFIPPA provides three conditions under which a municipality may collect, or require the collection of, personal information. These conditions are:

1. that the collection of personal information is expressly authorized by statute; or
2. that the collection of personal information is used for the purposes of law enforcement; or,
3. that the collection of personal information is necessary for the proper administration of a lawfully authorized activity.

The City of Ottawa was unable to justify to the IPC that the collection and use of personal information contained in its by-law is permissible under any of the three conditions contained in Section 28(2) of MFIPPA. In particular, the Municipal Act, 2001, as it read at the time of passage of the City of Ottawa's by-law, did not provide express authorization for the collection of personal information, nor did it permit the City of Ottawa to pass a business licensing by-law for the purposes of law enforcement. The City of Ottawa was required to justify the collection of personal information as necessary for a lawfully authorized purpose. The only lawfully authorized purpose which was available to justify the by-law was the City of Ottawa's ability to impose conditions on licensed businesses for a purpose permitted under the Municipal Act, 2001. Subsection 150(2) of the Municipal Act, 2001, as it read on the date of the enactment of the City of Ottawa by-law, only permitted the exercise of licensing powers for the purposes of health and safety, nuisance control, or consumer protection.

The IPC determined that the provisions of the by-law requiring the collection of personal information were passed for a consumer protection purpose. While evidence as to the helpfulness of the collected information to law enforcement was provided to the IPC, the fact that the provisions in question were enacted under the previous municipal legislation, the City of Ottawa was required to illustrate that the information being collected was necessary for the limited purposes of consumer protection and not for assisting in law enforcement.

In reaching its decision in Order MO-2225, the IPC considered the Ontario Court of Appeal's decision in the case Cash Converters Canada Inc. v Oshawa (City), (2007), 86 O.R. (3d) 401 (ON. C.A.). In Cash Converters, the Court of Appeal dealt with a City of Oshawa by-law regulating second-hand goods shops and requiring the collection of personal information, which was quite similar to the City of Ottawa by-law. As was the case, in Order MO-2225, the by-law was not upheld because the municipality was prohibited from passing the by-law for a law enforcement purpose and had insufficient evidence to support the necessity of collecting the evidence for the authorized purpose of consumer protection.

It is important to note, that the Court of Appeal in Cash Converters, specifically mentions that a different analysis regarding compliance with s. 28(2) of MFIPPA in relation to the use of the information for law enforcement purpose may be required for by-laws enacted under municipal legislation which does not limit business licensing powers to the three narrow purposes of health and safety, nuisance control and consumer protection. The provisions of the City of Toronto Act, 2006, have broadened the scope of powers of the City of Toronto with respect to business licensing. Therefore, the scope of personal information which may be collected in connection with second-hand good sellers will need to be re-examined in light of this legislative change. The IPC has issued a document entitled "Privacy Guidelines for Municipalities regulating Businesses Dealing in Second-hand Goods," which provides assistance to municipalities in outlining the relevant considerations for municipalities in justifying collection of personal information related to the regulation of Second-hand Good Sellers.

The IPC Privacy Guidelines for Municipalities regulating Businesses Dealing in Second-hand Goods require that any by-law be enacted in the least invasive manner to personal privacy. As a result a comprehensive privacy impact assessment of the entire collection and use of the personal information is a practical requirement prior to enacting any such by-law.

The City of Toronto held discussions with the IPC regarding the provisions in the City of Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 545, Licensing, which require Toronto licensed second-hand dealers, salvage yard dealers and dealers in old gold and other precious metals and jewellery to collect personal information from the sellers of goods. As a result of these discussions the IPC was of the opinion that the sections of the City of Toronto Municipal Code that offended MFIPPA should be removed from the City of Toronto Municipal Code.

COMMENTS

The City of Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 545, Licensing, contains provisions similar to those sections of the City of Ottawa's licensing by-law which require the collection, recording and production of personal information from sellers of goods to Toronto licensed second-hand, salvage yard dealers and dealers in old gold and other precious metals and jewellery.

The City of Toronto did not engage in a comprehensive privacy review prior to enacting these provisions, due to the fact that MFIPPA had not yet been enacted by the province. Therefore, the City of Toronto may not be able to establish that the provisions of the City of Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 545, Licensing, dealing with the collection and distribution of personal information, are in compliance with MFIPPA. As a result, the City of Toronto Municipal Code should be amended to cease such practices of collection and distribution of personal information.

Due to the amendments to the City of Toronto Municipal Code proposed by this report the Toronto Police Service's enforcement activities regarding property crime as it relates to stolen goods will be hampered by a lack of access to the personal information gathered by these Toronto licensed businesses. However, in some cases these businesses will continue to collect basic information, such as the name and address of their clientele, and this information can be accessed by the police if necessary.

City of Toronto Legal Services and the City of Toronto Corporate Access and Privacy Office have been consulted in the preparation of this report.
