Origin

(April 30, 2018) Report from the Executive Director, Social Development, Finance and Administration

Summary

For the first time in history, there are now more Torontonians aged 65+ than children aged 15 and below. The number of people in Toronto aged 65 and over is expected to almost double by 2041 and nationally, seniors are projected to constitute one-quarter of the Canadian population by 2036.

The City of Toronto views the growth of the ageing population as a triumph not a tsunami. At the turn of the twentieth century life expectancy was 51 years; it is now 81 years and growing. We all benefit from the energy and life experience seniors bring to our diverse communities and neighbourhoods. Seniors are a valuable asset and a key part of what makes this city great. However, in order to ensure the needs of this growing population are met, the City needs to plan and strategize accordingly.

Furthermore, the City needs to address the particular needs of vulnerable seniors. The challenges of ageing intersect and amplify vulnerabilities related to a number of factors such as gender, ability, ethnicity, culture, race, language, literacy, income, education, sexuality and citizenship status. People living with privilege, means and support will age very differently than those whose lived experience include victimization, violence, homelessness, housing insecurity, poverty, systemic discrimination and social isolation. City initiatives to support seniors must take an equity approach to consider the disparities in lived experience that exist among people who are ageing in Toronto and the many diverse communities that fall under the umbrella term of 'seniors'.

In 2013, the City launched the Seniors Strategy Version 1.0 to clearly and explicitly address some of the pressing issues facing seniors in the City and to lay the foundation for the work that is required to adequately and effectively support Toronto's growing ageing population. Version 1.0 included 91 far-reaching recommendations, of which 90 have been actioned. Reiterating its commitment to ensure seniors' needs are met and they are supported to live full, healthy lives, Council directed staff to review and update the Strategy.

Version 2.0 of the Toronto Seniors Strategy builds upon the success of Version 1.0 with 27 high-impact recommendations. Development of Version 2.0 was informed by an extensive and inclusive community engagement process and co-creation between the City of Toronto and the Toronto Seniors Strategy Accountability Table, which includes seniors, caregivers, the Toronto Seniors Forum, community agencies serving seniors, advocacy, diversity and equity organizations, local businesses, school boards, hospitals, Toronto Central Local Health Integration Network, academics, researchers and relevant agencies, 15 City Divisions, 5 City Agencies, and various Federal and Provincial ministries involved in funding and delivering services, programs and initiatives for seniors.

The way the City currently organizes its housing and services for seniors does not meet their needs now and this problem will be exacerbated as the populations grows over the next 10-15 years. The City needs to take a service system management approach to the needs of all seniors.
