Background

In 2003, the City of Toronto initiated a Class Environmental Assessment (EA) process to develop a Master Plan for the future management of biosolids, generated from the treatment of wastewater at the City's four wastewater treatment facilities. A draft Biosolids and Residuals Master Plan was completed in 2004 and is now being updated to reflect the findings of a peer review, completed in 2008, and to incorporate any changes that have arisen since the preparation of the draft Master Plan. This update focuses on finalizing plans for the management of biosolids.

The Biosolids Master Plan Update is being carried out in accordance with the procedures defined in the Municipal Class Environmental Assessment, and when completed will satisfy Phases 1 and 2 of the Class EA processes.
