Roy Wiseman

Roy Wiseman joined the Region of Peel in 1975 and has been Director of the Region's Information and Technology Services Division since 1986. In 2003, Roy also assumed responsibility as the Region's Chief Information Officer.

Under Roy's leadership, the Region of Peel has been a recognized leader in effective use of information and technology to improve delivery of municipal services. Peel's achievements were recognized by receiving a Showcase Ontario Award of Excellence for three consecutive years (2000-2002), as well as a national Technology in Government Distinction Award (co-winner with the City of Mississauga and City of Brampton for the Peel Region Public Sector Network, the largest municipally-owned fibre optics network in North America).

Roy is a long-term member of the Executive and Past President of the Municipal Information Systems Association (MISA) and was the first recipient of MISA's Regena Lerke Distinguished Service Award. He is also a Director of Regional Networks for Ontario, as well as municipal representative on the National CIO Subcommittee on Information Protection. He is a regular contributor of articles on municipal technology to MISA Interface and Municipal Monitor and has been a speaker at numerous conferences and events.

Roy has a degree in philosophy from the University of Toronto and a Masters degree in Public Administration from York University.
