REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

Glen Road Houses

Description

The properties at 14 and 16 Glen Road are worthy of designation under Part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act, and meet the criteria for municipal designation prescribed by the Province of Ontario under the three categories of design, associative and contextual value. The pair of semi-detached 2½-storey house form buildings are located on the west side of Glen Road, north of Howard Street. Constructed on land formerly owned by Edgar Jarvis whose family developed the Rosedale neighbourhood, the Glen Road Houses were part of a group of six semi-detached houses at 6-16 Glen Road that were in place by September 1884 according to the tax assessment rolls. At that time, all but one of the units remained vacant and in the ownership of William Muir and Arthur Coleman, who developed the sites. The occupants in 1885 included merchants, an estate agent, and the owner of a livery stable. The properties at 14 and 16 Glen Road were listed on the City of Toronto Inventory of Heritage Properties in 1974, along with other remaining buildings along this short stretch of Glen Road.

Statement of Cultural Heritage Value

The Glen Road Houses have design value as a pair of surviving late 19th century house form buildings with patterned brickwork that are indicative of the style of residential buildings that were once prominent on Sherbourne Street and in the adjoining neighbourhood. The houses at 14 and 16 Glen Road are distinguished from their neighbours at 6-8 and 10-12 Glen Road by their segmental-arched window openings. Photographs in the collection of the City of Toronto Archives dating to 1913 reveal that the buildings retain most of their original features.

Historically, the Glen Road Houses are integral parts of the collection of late 19th and early 20th century residential buildings along the street. The similar semi-detached houses at 18-20 and 22-24 Glen Road were demolished with other buildings for the eastward extension of Bloor Street East and the widening of the Glen Road Bridge to Rosedale, making the survival of the Glen Road Houses more significant.

The pair of semi-detached houses at 14 and 16 Glen Road are important in context with the other surviving buildings on Glen Road, where the Roslyn Apartments at #1 and #7 and the house form building designed by Eden Smith at #9 are also identified on the City's heritage inventory. Directly east, St. Simon's Anglican Church at 40 Howard Street (now known as 525 Bloor Street East) is designated under Part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act, while a number of single and semi-detached houses on Howard Street are also recognized heritage properties.

Heritage Attributes

The heritage attributes of the Glen Road Houses at 14 and 16 Glen Road are:

- The 2½-storey structures covered by gable roofs with brick chimneys on the ends and cross gables on the east slopes.
- The red brick cladding with contrasting yellow brick detailing, and the brick and wood trim (although the houses have been painted, the polychromatic brickwork remains visible).
- The organization of the principal (east) façades, with the main entrances placed in the centre and featuring segmental-arched door openings with paired wood doors and transoms.
- The open single-storey verandah protecting the entries.
- On either side of the entries, the 2½-storey frontispieces under the cross gables where the first floor has single-storey bay windows with cornices.
- On the bay windows, the single oversized segmental-arched window opening on #14 and the pair of segmental-arched window openings on #16, all with brick voussoirs.
- In the second storey, the segmental-arched window openings with brick voussoirs, apart from the oriel window on #14.
- The diminutive round-arched window openings in the attic level.

The two-storey flat-roofed wings attached to the rear (west) walls of the semi-detached house form buildings at 14 and 16 Glen Road are not identified as heritage attributes in the Reasons for Designation.
