In 2014, the City of Toronto Book Award will celebrate its 40th anniversary. At present there are street pavers on Queen Street West which mark names and titles of previous recipients up to 1996. To commemorate the 40th anniversary of the City of Toronto’s Book Award, which is one of the oldest literary award programs in Canada, it is proposed that new plaques and pavers be designed and installed to recognize this anniversary and that all the previous recipients of this prestigious award be included. An initial installation is planned for fall 2014, including a plaque at Toronto City Hall.

This project has been endorsed by the City of Toronto Book Awards Committee, the International Festival of Authors (now in its 35th year), and The Word On The Street Toronto (now in its 25th year). Recently a literary hub has been established at Harbourfront Centre through the partnership established between the International Festival of Authors and The Word On The Street Toronto. In 2015, The Word On The Street Festival will be relocated to Harbourfront Centre.
