The City of Toronto’s Long-Term Financial Direction
Introduction

• The City has been able to achieve balanced budgets on an annual basis, despite underlying concerns regarding sustainability.

• The staff report:
  • reviews the expense and revenue patterns of recent budgets
  • provides early/basic forecasts of future expense pressures and revenue performance
  • outlines a series of principles and directions to ensure long-term financial stability.

• Circumstances of the recent past have been uniquely favourable.
• Trends do not form a reliable basis for future fiscal planning.
• Changes in both expense and revenue management are likely to be required.

2017 Operating Pressures

Note:
1. Additional TTC pressure includes revenue shortfall and base salary increase, but excludes Presto and service improvement cost increases.
2. Base pressure mainly includes base salary increases (excl. TTC and Police), base non-salary inflation increases, as well as other base expense and revenue changes (incl. user fee, MLTT, upload), etc.
3. Total 2017 operating pressure of $588m excludes service improvements, debt costs for unmet needs, and Police. Net pressure is $483m after Tax Rate Increase ($52m), Assessment Growth ($40m), and the City Building Fund estimates ($13.5m).
Potential Shortcuts to Balance the Budget

- Provincial or federal government funding for capital projects
- Continued gains from the Municipal Land Transfer Tax
- Drawn down reserve funds
- Manage down surpluses
- Lower “capital from current” financing.
Next Steps

• The report recommends that staff report back by the end of the year with approaches to strengthen financial planning, decision-making and oversight, including:
  • Strategies and processes to improve integration between program and financial planning
  • A multi-year expenditure management plan
  • A multi-year revenue strategy.

• Staff are scheduled to report back to Executive Committee on revenue options in June 2016.
