Dear Executive Committee Executive Committee,

Home sharing through Airbnb is making a real difference for hosts in Toronto. We're casually sharing the homes in which we live, not running commercial businesses or taking housing off the rental market.

Money earned from home sharing is an economic lifeline in our increasingly expensive city. The modest income I earn from sharing my home on a casual basis helps me afford living in Toronto. The flexibility of home sharing through Airbnb means that I'm free to choose when I want to share my home and when I don't.

Home sharing brings guests to neighbourhoods across Toronto, helping local businesses benefit from tourism dollars they wouldn't otherwise have access to. Through Airbnb, we welcome diverse guests from across Ontario, Canada and around the world. Hosts like myself are ambassadors for Toronto. We help connect our guests with authentic experiences and give them the opportunity to enjoy all the best things about Toronto and its people. We host because we are passionate about our community and our city, and enjoy the chance to share it with others.

I understand the need for the city to create regulations around home sharing in Toronto. As a member of Airbnb's host community in Toronto, I want to know and follow the rules. It is only right that we look at ways to ensure that our laws keep up with the ever-evolving world we live in. That being said, any new rules must support and respect home sharing in a way that is fair, easy to follow, and enables us to continue to share our homes and welcome guests to Toronto.

I encourage you to make sure that any new rules reflect the positive impact of home sharing for hosts like myself, local businesses, and neighbourhoods across Toronto.
