Dear Board of Health members

Re: Update on Toronto Public Health Re-organization

Since amalgamation in 1998, Toronto Public Health has experienced changes, growth and evolving priorities as an organization.

In 2017, Toronto City Council directed that Toronto Public Health has conduct an organizational review to assess effectiveness of the organization, and identify possible opportunities for improvements.

The goal of Toronto Public Health's organizational review is to identify how to enhance the organization's ability to improve the health status of Toronto residents through prevention efforts that are focused at the population level. It is also designed to strengthen Toronto Public Health's capacity to deliver programs and services that meet the province's new, 2018, Public Health Standards.

As the re-organization has progressed and with a new Board of Health, it is important that the Board receive an update on the status.

Recommendation:

1. The Board of Health request the Medical Officer of Health to report to the December 9th, 2019 meeting of the Board with a report and presentation with update on the Toronto Public Health internal re-organization.

Sincerely,

Joe Cressy
