

PB29.5

147 Church Street - Notice of Intention to Designate a Property under Part IV, Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act

PB29.5 147 Church Street

This location map is for information purposes only; the exact boundaries of the property are not shown. The arrow marks the location of the site.

PB29.5 147 Church Street

Current photographs of the west (left) and east (right) elevations of the building at 147 Church Street. (Heritage Planning, 2021)

PB29.5

147 Church Street

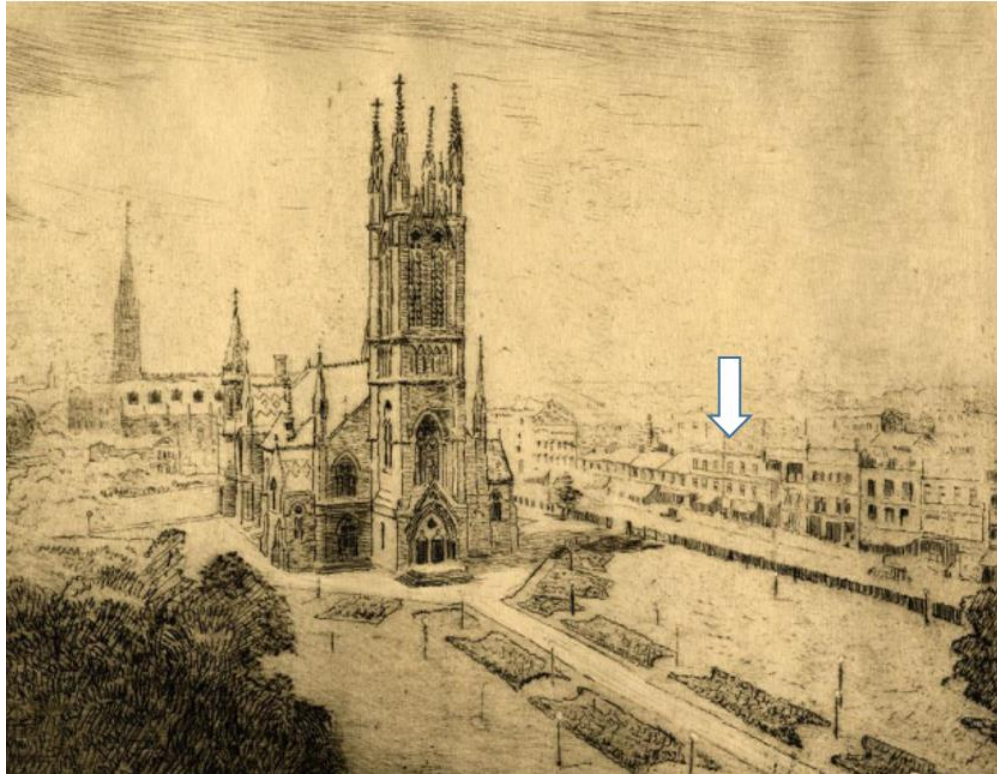

1851 Fleming Topographical Plan of the City of Toronto, showing the approximate location of 147 Church Street. At this time, the subject property was part of a row of houses on the east side of Church Street. (Ng)

1870s archival photograph of the Metropolitan United Church at Queen and Church streets, with the approximate location of the former row house at 147 Church Street indicated on the right (Toronto Public Library [TPL])

PB29.5

147 Church Street

1910 sketch of the Metropolitan United Church by artist Owen Staples, showing 147 Church Street on the right (TPL)

1914 archival photograph of the Metropolitan Church and St. Michael's Cathedral, with 147 Church Street shown on the right (TPL)

PB29.5 147 Church Street

BENNETT & WRIGHT, PLUMBERS, ETC.

In no department of sanitary science has there been greater progress made than in sanitary appliances for the home and for more public purposes, and therefore it is a pleasant duty to call attention to the above firm of hot water and steam heating engineers and sanitary

& W., yet it may be added that Mr. Jos. Wright is the sole proprietor, and his long experience and acknowledged skill in his profession are brought to bear to perfect every detail of the work undertaken.

The premises have during the present season been almost doubled in capacity, and now there is none in Canada better equipped. Of course the operations de-

1892 advertisement in The Globe showing the Bennett & Wright Co. factory and stockroom at the northeast corner of Queen and Dalhousie streets

1913 Goad's Map, showing the location of 147 Church Street (blue arrow) in relation to the Bennett & Wright stockroom at the northeast corner of Church and Dalhousie streets (red arrow) (City of Toronto Archives [CTA])

PB29.5 147 Church Street

Context views of Church Street looking southeast (left) and northeast (right), showing the fine-grained 19th and early 20th century character of the streetscape, and indicating the location of 147 Church Street. The spire of St. James Cathedral can be seen to the south, and the park-like grounds of the Metropolitan United Church are visible to the west (Heritage Planning, 2021)