COMMENTS

We are pleased to report that after consulting with various potential partners, the North York Historical Society is interested in exploring a community-based project to establish a digital time capsule for North York.

City staff, including those from the Toronto Archives, Strategic Protocol and External Relations and Economic Development & Culture Museum and Heritage Services, are prepared to provide technical advice to the Society in carrying out this work.

We will ensure that the Chair and Members of the North York Community Council are kept informed about the progress of the project, and the role that Members might play in any project launch activities.
