Audit Objectives

The objective of this audit was to review the procurement of the PayIt platform and outcomes achieved to date.

This audit aimed to answer the following questions:

- Did the procurement with PayIt properly follow the City's policy and processes for unsolicited proposals?
- Did the implementation of the PayIt platform achieve the intended financial and non-financial outcomes and benefits (as reported to City Council)?

Background – Key Terms

Unsolicited proposals provide external organizations an opportunity to submit new and innovative ideas to the City for the purpose of obtaining a contract with the City with the express intent of securing a financial return for the organization.

A Swiss Challenge is a form of Request for Proposal (RFP) process, when the City has received an unsolicited proposal, to put the opportunity to the market to invite others to also submit proposals. The original entity which submitted the unsolicited proposal is then given the opportunity to match or better the best competing proposal which comes out of the Swiss Challenge process, before the City can proceed with the challenging proposal.

A proof of concept of a product, service or solution is a demonstration of its feasibility, and how the product, service or solution will fulfill the customer's requirements.

Key Audit Findings – 3 Categories

- A. Policy and Process for Unsolicited Proposals Was Not Followed, Even After Concerns Were Raised
- B. Expected Benefits and Outcomes Were Not Fully Realized
- C. Records Supporting Key Decisions Were Not Properly Retained

A.1. Senior Staff Raised Concerns Internally About the Procurement Approach

- Concerns raised internally by senior staff:
 - Under what authority are they proceeding to deviate from the unsolicited proposal policy and process – Council authority is needed?
 - Would a proof of concept give PayIt an unfair advantage?
 - Does the PayIt proposal even meet the criteria to be considered an unsolicited proposal?
- Unclear that these concerns raised were addressed prior to staff proceeding with the proof of concept with PayIt

A.2. Unsolicited Proposal Guidelines Were Not Followed

- Strategic Partnerships Office was not the sole point of contact
- Pre-conditions for an unsolicited proposal were not clearly met
 - It resembles a current or upcoming competitive procurement
 - It requires substantial assistance from the City
 - The goods or services are readily available from other sources
- A Swiss Challenge be conducted – instead staff initially recommended a sole source

Swiss Challenge: Opportunities for Continuous Improvement

- Unsolicited proposals policy requires that a Swiss Challenge be conducted
- Areas for continuous improvement:
 - Extend invitation to identified potential competitors
 - Provide additional detail on the evaluation scoring criteria
