Comments:

On behalf of the Toronto Association for Democracy in China (TADC), we are writing to register our opposition and grave concerns over the proposed bylaw restricting demonstrations in Toronto.

The fundamental right of citizens to publicly demonstrate and voice our collective concerns has been a cornerstone of our democratic system, enshrined in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The proposed bylaw to limit and infringe on this fundamental freedom of expression will be a draconian step backward from the core democratic values of which we are proud of as Torontonians.

We are particularly concerned with the notion of restricting protest around 'vulnerable institutions' in the proposed bylaw. What would be the process and criteria in determining such institutions? Equally important, who would be responsible for making the decision to designate or not, and would anyone be able to challenge the decision? Would designated 'vulnerable institutions' be publicly listed? Who would shoulder the burden to inform the public the area around a 'vulnerable institution' prohibited from demonstration so as to prevent participants in a protest inadvertently breaking the law?

TADC was founded on the eve of the 1989 Tiananmen Square Massacre in Beijing, China and has been advocating for human rights and democracy in China, in Canada and at the United Nations for the past 35 years. TADC along with like-minded pro-democracy groups organize protest rallies in front of the Toronto Chinese Consulate every June 4 and October 1. Our protests have been carried out in cooperation with the Toronto Police, following their directions for a peaceful demonstration every time. Toronto Police bear the duty to exercise their judgement and authority in a timely manner to contain a demonstration before turning unruly. Rather than holding unruly protesters accountable, a bylaw to restrict the public's freedom to demonstrate is a punishment to all.

It would be unfathomable to imagine that in the future we would not be able to protest in front of the Toronto Chinese Consulate over its suppression of dissent and political prosecution of human rights defenders and pro-democracy activists in Hong Kong and China, should the Consulate itself or its adjacent address have found its way to be designated as 'vulnerable' under the new bylaw. In fact, it would be truly ironic.

We believe that the intent and framework of this proposed bylaw, if adopted, would run contrary to the civil engagement and democratic participation that our City so proudly promotes under the banner of Diversity is Our Strength. The notion of diversity implies that there are bound to be differences among us and it will take all stakeholders including our elected representatives, civil society and law enforcement to work together to ensure tolerance and respect are accorded to all. We sincerely urge you to withdraw this proposed bylaw. We cannot afford to go backward in safeguarding our Canadian democracy and freedom.

Thank you for your attention,
