To the Toronto Heritage Preservation Board:

Please add my comments to the Agenda for the June 8, 2026, meeting of the Toronto Heritage Preservation Board to discuss the Notice of Intention to Designate of 34 Jason Road, a building associated with 'Elm Bank', the farm established by John Grubb in 1833.

I understand that my comments and personal information in this email will form part of the public record and that my name will be listed as a correspondent on the agenda and minutes of the Toronto Heritage Preservation Board or its committees. Comments To all Members of the Toronto Heritage Preservation Board:

I am writing on behalf of the Etobicoke Historical Society to express our Society's support for the designation of 34 Jason Road. We are very familiar with the history of this building, and after reviewing the report on this property, the Society believes that 34 Jason Road meets several criteria for the designation as laid out by the province. Further, the building forms a complex of buildings known as Elm Bank farm and after almost 200 years remains a landmark in the community. This building is architecturally, historically and contextually rooted in the growth and development of Thistletown and the northern part of the township of Etobicoke from the early 1800s onwards.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. Should you have further questions, please feel free to contact me.

Sincerely,
