Broadview Avenue Extension

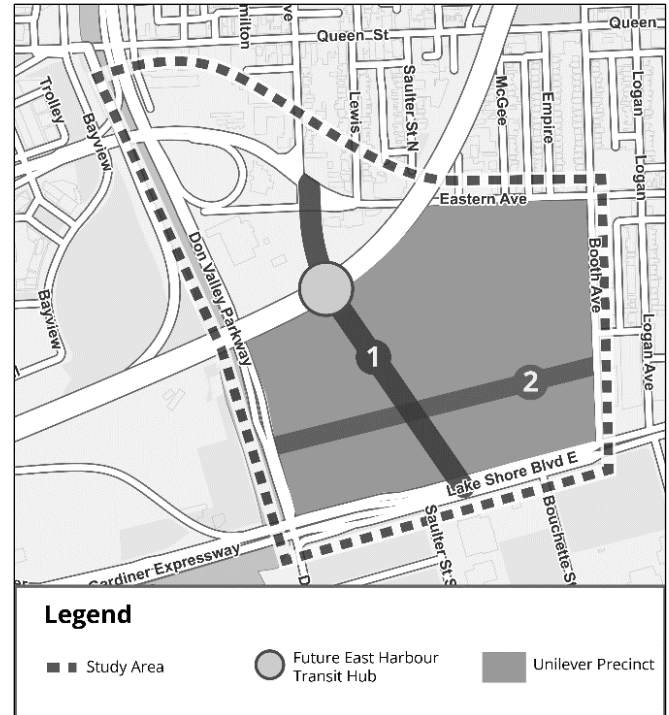

Municipal Class Environmental Assessment: Notice of Completion

The City of Toronto has completed the Broadview Avenue Extension Municipal Class Environmental Assessment (MCEA) Study for the following planned new streets:

- 1 Broadview Avenue Extension, between Eastern Avenue and Lake Shore Boulevard East
- 2 New East-West Street, between Don Roadway and Booth Avenue

These two streets were previously identified as Schedule C projects in the Port Lands and South of Eastern Transportation & Servicing Master Plan (TSMP), completed in 2017, which satisfied Phases 1 and 2 of the MCEA process.

The Broadview Avenue Extension MCEA study satisfies Phases 3 and 4 of the MCEA process and was closely co-ordinated with the East Harbour Transit-Oriented Community development, the East Harbour Transit Hub, the Broadview and Eastern Flood Protection project, and several other ongoing studies and initiatives underway in the area.

As a result of the evaluation of design alternatives, the MCEA study has identified the following preferred designs, which improve area connectivity; prioritize space for surface transit, pedestrians, and cyclists; allow auto access; create green streets; and provide space for vehicle parking lay-bys to accommodate a variety of curbside activities:

Broadview Avenue Extension (Eastern Avenue to Lake Shore Boulevard East):

- Generally, a 37.5 metre right-of-way width
- One traffic lane in each direction
- Dedicated streetcar lanes down the centre of street
- Raised and separated cycle tracks
- Wide sidewalks
- Street trees in planters and bioswales
- Some vehicle parking lay-by spaces

New East-West Street (Don Roadway to Booth Avenue):

- 24 to 27 metre right-of-way width
- One traffic lane in each direction
- Raised and separated cycle tracks
- Wide sidewalks
- Street trees in planters
- Some vehicle parking lay-by spaces
